SHOT INTO CROWD ONSTEAMER'S DECK

A Wild Sensation Created by Bugeye Captain's Act

YOUNG LADY HIT IN THE NECK

Steamer Maryland Tries to Land in Crowded Channel While Passengers Guy Crew.

(Special to The Times-Dispatchi) ONANCOCK, VA., January 2.—A wild sensation was created in Onancock today. On the arrival of the steamer Maryland, on her regular trip from Snow Hill to Baltimore, the tide was extremely low, and the steamer had great trouble in getting over the bar at the mouth of Onancook Creek. As a consequence, she reached her landing four hours late, There were vessels lying beside the wharves surrounding the B. C. and A. Railway Company's pier, and the captain of the Maryland, Richard Howerd, had to make several trials before she gould successfully make the landing, as the channel is very narrow. The decks of the Maryland were crowded with passengers, the weather being very mild. Thought-lessly they commenced to guy the crow of a fishing bugeye lying on the north shore, unloading some household goods for a party from Tangler Islaid. The crew became violently angered, and on the next trial of the steamer to reach the pier, their captain, standing on the fieck of the bugeye with a double barrel gun, shot twice directly into the crowd of nearly one hundred persons on the deck of the Maryland, and slightly wounded in the neck a young lady whose name could not be found out to-night, as she immediately retired to her state-foom. wharves surrounding the B. C. and A.

sne immediately relired to her stateroom.

A panic was created on the deck of the sieamer, every one sorambling to get to the saloon. The deed was done in the nresence of over two hundred people, as, the Maryland was crowded with visitors returning to the cities after the holidays.
No blame can be attached to the officers of the steamer, as the buggye was very much in her way, and several times prevented her from securing her landing.
Some say that the shots were fired at the cuplain because of his coming so close to the buggye. It is stated that authorities will take the matter up and some arrests will probably be made in the morning.

Some of the Most Damaging Testimony Offered by the Prosccution Was Ruled Out.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

FARMVILLE, VA., Jan. 2.—The trial of B. C. Wooldridge for burning the resumed in the Prince Edward Circuit Court here to-day. At his first trial held at Buckingham Courthouse, in August last, the result was a hung jurynine being for conviction and three for acquittal, Subsequently the judge granted a change of venue on motion of the defense. The prisoner was brought into court accompanied by his wife, and one of his grown daughters, who sat at his

of his grown daughters, who sat at his side.

Considerable loss of time was occasioned by the absence of witnesses and not until the court had made rule against some of them did the Commonwealth consent to proceed. One of the Commonwealth's witness, C. J. Sutherland, of Albemarle, was declared to be of utmost importance, and as no return had been made by the sheriff of Albemarle upon the subpoens for Sutherland, Judge Hundley sent an officer to that county for both of them.

In all, seventy-one witnesses were called for the Commonwealth and thirty-eight for the defense.

Out of a venire of forty men it was not hard to get a jury of twelve. They are as follows:

T. A. Calhoun, H. L. Womack, J. D. Watson, G. T. Butcher, G. W. Redd, N. T. Dillon, W. H. Wood, Caleb Baldwin, Ponsford Butcher, G. E. Barksdale, E. W. Venable and C. H. Dixon.

The jury was put in charge of the sheriff, who was instructed by the Court to permit them to read no newspaper until all news matter relating to this case had been cut out and further, the jury were instructed if they did see anything in a newspaper referring to the subject, not to read it.

The entire morning session was consumed in calling witnesses, empanelling the jury and arraigning the prisoner.

At the afternoon session, the testimony was commenced, Miss Janio-C. Forbes being the first witness. She is the daughter of the late John S. Forbes whose houses were fired on the inght of March 3, 1904. Her appearance in the court-room this afternoon brought with it a dent-like stillness, which pervaded the hall of justice from the time she topk the witness stand until the lawyers were through questioning her.

Miss Forbes's Testimony.

Miss Forbes's Testimony.

Miss Forbes's Testimony.

What she told the jury to-day was, upon the whole, a reiteration of her testimony given at the trial in August. In audit undertone, she told of being awakchied about 12 o'clock in the night of March 3d last, when only her aged father, an old colored woman and herself were beneath the roof, to find the dwelling and every outhouse on the premises in a blaze. She told the jury how in vain she and her father worked to save what they could on that bitter cold night. And angoing a few other things, was a trink from which something less than one hundred dollars was missing.

During the two hours in which Miss Forbes was upon the stand not a question was asked her by the defense, but a number of exceptions to the court's ruling on questions asked by opposing counsel were noted.

She testified that no one came to her home until sunrise the morning after the fire. Wooldridge lived about a half a mile from the burned place and did not come, but he sent a note by Floyd Jones (colored), invisting witness and her father to his home, saying his doors were open to them. Neither accepted the invitation, but went to a nearby relative that morning. Miss Forbes said that Wooldridge was with her father on the 3d of April when he died and several days afterwards he told the witness that he was gind it was over with her father, that it would have been a blessing had he passed away, in January, that she asked him if he wasn't ashamed to make such a remark, to which Wooldridge made no reply.

The court excluded some of the most damaging testimony, which the prosecution attempted to bring out white Miss Forbes was on the stand, and at the close of the day's proceedings it was not believed that any evidence had sone to the jury, which would tend to fasten the crime upon the prisoner. It is not known whether or not the prosecution will be strengthened by any additional testimony, which may have been discovered since the first trial, while on the other hand the defense is free to say that it has a number of new witnesses who will prove of prime importance in freeling their client from the grave charge against him. Both Woodridge and Forbes are in Prince Edward jall, the latter awaiting his trial, which was to-day by consent of counsel and the court set for January 18th.

The prison quarters, which before were declared unfit for human habitation, are now thoroughly clean and the two prisoners are comfortably provided for.

Congressiana Flood and Mr. William Lancaster are defending the prisoner, while Colonel E. W. Hubard and Mr. Aubtrey Strode are looking after the Commonwealth's interests.

The representatives of the Lake Company will make no statement concerning the destination of the submarines, but it is believed that they will go to Russia. That three Lake boats have already gone to the Czar is not denied. Members of the party of machinists taken from here by Constructor Peacock, of the Lake Company, stated that they had been employed to go to Russia and assist in "setting up" the two boats taken from here by the barke Kennelee and afterwards transferred to a Hamburg-American liner.

It is rumored this afternoon that when the Adria attempts to sail, she will be held up by United States officials and her skipper required to state where he proposes to take the submarines,

A pilot boarded the Adria this afternoon and it was understood that he would take the vessel out at 4 o'clock, Shortly before sailing time, a mysterious stranger hurried aboard the Adria and had a consultation with the captain, Four o'clock passed and no further preparations for sailing were made and the vessel is still at the yard to-night.

It is understood that the "stranger" warned the captain that he would be stopped if he attempted to sail. Tomorrow's developments are awaited with interest.

Murder of Luther Trader.

(Special to The Times-Dispatch.)

ONANCOCK, VA., Jan. 2.—The trial of Thomas Smith for the murder of Luther Trader at Hallwood last July opened in the Circuit Court at Accomac Courthouse to-day, Judge John W. G. Blackstone presided. Smith married a daughter of Samuel Trader secretly, and the two families have been in a state of turmoll ever since. The Traders considered Smith as not being their social equal, and they had come to blows several times.

On a Saturday night, last July, the two Traders, father and son, met Smith, and after some words a lively fight was started. The elder Trader some words a lively fight was started. The elder Trader some words a lively fight was started. The elder Trader some words a lively fight was started. The elder Trader, the som of Samuel Trader, aged about twenty-one years. Another buil struck the elder Trader in the forchead, but glanced off. 'Dink' Sterling ran up and cried fair play, and he got a ball in the stomach which nearly resulted in his death. A small boy, running away from the fray, was shot in the back by a stray builet.

Young Trader also used a pistol, and some say the father also had one.

The case will take nearly the entire week, and will be fought hard by the hest local counsel obtainable. The interest is especially keen in the norther part of the county, where the fray took place.

Smith has sines been in the county is limable to get ball. He could have escaped once, when five negroes broke fall in October, but refused to go.

The last two terms of court have been taken up with murder trists, and the other business is far behind.
